Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service! I urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. I am concerned that this proposal could make my current service unaffordable.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is unfair!

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience. In fact, I have a Trac-Fone which I keep in the car and use only for emergencies on the road or when I am traveling and need to make a call. I purchase 250 minutes for $99, and that lasts me for one year. I certainly do not feel that I should have to pay a tax equal to that paid by others who use their cell phones 1,000 or more minutes per month. My husband and I are senior citizens living on a fixed income, but we do need a phone in the car for safety and security.

Your cooperation in this matter will appreciated. Please do not increase taxes on our phone service.
Keep the USF Fair!

Sincerely,

Glenda Edwards
